Additional Study

NCATE Transformation Initiative Clinic, a three-hour session in Atlanta, Georgia, February 2010

NCATE Orientation, a three-day workshop in Alexandria Virginia, April 2009

Practical Rasch Measurement, on-line 40-hour course with John M. Linacre, www.statistics.com, Summer, 2006

Winsteps Workshop, two-day workshop in Research Triangle with John M. Linacre, Summer, 2003

Professional Themes

Weaving together the integrated disciplines of measurement, evaluation, assessment, and research, Dr. Wilkerson's teaching, scholarship, and research all focus on three related themes: (1) the evaluative function of accreditation from a theoretical and practical standpoint, (2) the credible (valid, reliable, and fair) assessment of the cognitive and affective domains of all learners, and (3) the pragmatic applications of measurement and evaluation theory (including Rasch measurement) in the teacher education and the general higher education communities. Through a combination of college courses taught, research conducted, assessment instruments developed, and a continuous stream of professional development services provided for faculty and administrators, she advocates for the use of critical principles of measurement and evaluation in educational practice. The evaluation models she has developed, beginning with SIDPASS (1987) and continuing with CAATS and DAATS (2007), have served as the theoretical framework undergirding and permeating her career for over three decades. These models, like all of her work, have firm roots in both measurement and evaluation theory and the legal and psychometric requirements of the profession, Standards of Educational and Psychological Testing (AERA, APA, NCME, 1999).

- K-12 Impact Dispositions Scale (KIDS)
- Candidate Dispositions Checklist (CDC)
- Situational Reflection Assessment (SRA)

Note: This battery of five assessments is in the norming stage of development as a series standards-based dispositions assessments, developed using the DAATS model. The battery combines traditional measures of affective assessment with modern Rasch modeling. W.S. Lang is co-author. B.S. Slitkin is the professional artist for SRA. It is our intent to publish the battery once norming is complete.
